EXCELLENCE AWARDS

The Language Society of the 3M Club gives employees the opportunity to learn a foreign language during their lunch hour or at evening classes.

Supervisor of Employee Recreation at 3M is Edward M. Bruno.

The Silver City Sno-Birds, a snowmobile club at Oneida, Ltd., in Sherrill, N. Y., was one of two winners of Certificates of Excellence awards in the sportsman's club classification.

This organization has stressed public service in its program for members,

Stephen Peek is Recreation Director for Oneida.

Another winner in the category of sportsman's clubs was the Campers Club of the Lockheed-Georgia Co., in Marietta, Ga.

Directing recreation at Lockheed-Georgia is Roy L. McClure.

A Certificate of Excellence in the field of social activities was awarded to the Department of State-USIA Recreation Association, Washington, D. C., where Bruce D. Sjurseth is Executive Secretary.

Employee participation in the recreation association's activities increased from 2,646 employees in 1968, to 6,250 in 1969 — an increase of over 136%.

The final Certificate of Excellence was awarded to Raytheon Co. in Andover, Mass., for its work in the field of retirees' programming.

Raytheon organized a club called the "Thirty Niners," a term derived from Jack Benny and his perennial age. The club was divided into two groups — the actual retirees (called alumni) and those "in-plant" employees over 50.
